The spring brings us closer to our annual meeting in New Orleans. The planning committee has been working hard at putting together a fantastic program. We are fortunate in New Orleans to have three orthopaedic teaching programs from which we have chosen speakers for our annual meeting. We also have superb state-wide physicians to supplement our program. There still is room for podium and e-poster presentations so I encourage all to submit an abstract for the program committee to consider for participation.

This year's educational program will provide the participants with a potential 17.25 hours of CME. This is a very well rounded educational opportunity and should benefit all of us in our daily clinical practice.

I am honored to have Dr. James Andrews and Dr. Marc Philippon as presidential guest speakers. They are two of the most prominent and well respected physicians in our profession. Their presentations are surely something you won't want to miss. Also, our meeting provides the type of venue that will foster the ability for one-on-one conversation with the presenters and other attendees.

The meeting will be held at The Roosevelt Hotel in New Orleans - a Waldorf Astoria Hilton. This is one of the classic grand hotels in our nation and is next to the historic French Quarter. As we all know, New Orleans is an amazing city to visit. Its art and musical culture are second to none and its dining cuisine is unparalleled. If you have been here before you know what it means to "miss New Orleans."

So make plans to come down to New Orleans for the 104th Clinical Orthopaedic Society Meeting September 29 – October 1, 2016.

Laissez les bon temps rouler!

SPOUSE & GUEST ACTIVITIES

Tastebud Tours of New Orleans

Thursday, September 29, 10:30 am – 2:30 pm

However many days you're spending in the Crescent City, there's no better way to start your visit than with the ultimate local food tour. Walk and eat your way through the streets of the French Quarter and visit Jackson Square in the heart of the city while our guides entertain you with fun facts and point out famous sights.

We will walk to five different food tastings (enough for lunch), which are included in the ticket price (restaurants are subject to change):

Café Beignet - Locals have been savoring their rich, chicory coffee with sweet beignets for more than 200 years. Here, beignets are still mixed, cut and fried to order, then dusted generously with powdered sugar. The grand café is a great place for people-watching too.

Laura's Pralines and Candies - Nestled in the historic French Quarter, the Creole pralines and hand-dipped chocolates here are made fresh daily with recipes that date back to the 18th century. New Orleans' oldest candy store is still going strong.

Johnny's Po-boy - Established in 1950, this third generation French Quarter landmark dishes out the best po-boys in Nawlins. The sandwich was first served to striking streetcar workers in 1929 and has been a New Orleans favorite ever since.

The Old Coffeepot - Classic Cajun and Creole cuisine has been the calling card here since 1894. We'll try the same jambalaya that Guy Fieri featured on Diners, Drive-ins and Dives.

Tujague's - This restaurant was previously a Spanish armory before it started slinging classic Creole dishes in an elegant setting. We'll try their house specialty, a tender boiled beef brisket served in Creole sauce with just a touch of horseradish.

The Lunch Bell Ringeth! Come hungry!
